5.2. Sustainable Rural Livelihoods Programme

Narrative version of the ToC

IF small-scale farmers and household are encouraged to plant their fields and home gardens AND are willing to participate in the training and technical support THEN there would be reduction of hunger and food insecurity within households. IF BRC and its partners provide them with productions inputs and technical support AND are trained how to monitor their crop performance and in management of their enterprises AND the climatic conditions are favourable to their crops, THEN there would be improved productive use of land and quality of yields. IF small scale farmers are supported to supply their produce to local and regional markets AND markets are available to them on favourable terms, THEN there would be increased opportunities for employment AND improved business and household income, which will lead to reduction in household poverty and food insecurity, which will result in reduced poverty levels in rural communities.
